BEST FOR FOODIES

THE WINNER

The LINE Hotel, Los Angeles, California

This Koreatown spot has style for days, but what keeps guests — and locals — coming back is Roy Choi's irresistible take on hotel dining. Think creative veggie-centric fare in a greenhouse at the poolside Commissary restaurant, or red bean mooncakes from a former Momofuku pastry chef at the creatively capitalized POT caFé. Room service is both unforgettable and utterly Angeleno, spanning breakfast burritos, Cobb salads and a thermos filled with egg-and-cheese ramen. All arrive at your doorstep via hand-pulled wagon and are wrapped in vintage cloth as a nod to the way Choi's Korean-American parents used to deliver food to friends' potlucks. It's not every hipster-chic hotel that has us thinking, When you're here, you're family.
