

Travel

The 5 Coolest Places to Eat in L.A.

INSTAGRAM/REPUBLIQUELA

BY ROSE STEWART
December 19, 2015

In a city slightly obsessed with looking good, these high-design restaurants bring the most style. (And yeah, the food's amazing, too)

Commissary

3515 Wilshire Blvd.

Roy Choi's rooftop restaurant at the Line Hotel in Koreatown is housed inside of (and next to) a giant glass greenhouse, the tables tucked under and around hanging plants (and vines, and fig trees), with garden hoses snaking everywhere. So yeah, the veggie-centric menu makes sense. In the daytime, light filters in for a dappled sun-drenched feel that'll lift you out of a hangover, while at night the glass house becomes a glowing garden party. Down enough cocktails, and you'll be eyeing the Line Hotel's rooftop pool a few steps away.