

FOOD & WINE

Order In

BY KATE HEDDINGS MAY 2017 ISSUE

Start the day strong with this killer noodle soup, complete with pork ribs, Broccolini and Herbs.

Photo: Con Poulos

Long gone are the days of forgettable room service. With star chefs opening newsworthy restaurants in hotels across the country, there's more reason than ever to have breakfast (and, heck, why not lunch and dinner?) in bed. Out with soggy Caesar salads and overdone burgers; bring on Cambodian noodle soup, mile high biscuit sandwiches, buckets of fried chicken and big batches of old fashioned. Staying in has never been so fun.

Morning Glory

The Line, Washington, DC

If the a.m. scene at Erik Bruner-Yang's restaurant in the lobby of this new DC hotel is too much, never fear: You can have your loose-leaf Taiwanese tea and hearty Cambodian breakfast noodle soup delivered to your room. Bonus: You can also order specialty dishes from a rotating cast of visiting chefs, like Edward Lee and Pichet Ong.

thelinehoteldc.com