

bon appétit

THE TRAVEL ISSUE

FEATURING

A Seasonal Feast in

LEBANON

p. 60

We Can All Agree on
RED SAUCE AMERICA

p. 84

Dining in the Clouds in

PERU

p. 96

MAY 2019

$6.99

05

0 75110 08432 5

6

Why Put on Pants When You Can Order Room Service?

An unapologetic ode to the laziest, most decadent way to eat

HERE I AM, snuggled up in a snow-white bed, surrounded by bamboo trays and teensy ketchup bottles, shoveling food into my face like a modern-day Marie Antoinette. I wear no pants. Pants are not my concern. In this moment, I am queen—unafraid of future beheadings, nor the hefty bill that awaits me at checkout, nor the PB&Js I'll be subsisting on for the rest of the week. Room service is the height of scorched-earth indulgence, and that's exactly why I love it. It's millennial stay-at-home-ism, but better because your home is clean and stylish and not actually your home. And these days it's more lavish than ever. At The Line in D.C., on-site restaurant Brothers and Sisters will deliver its menu straight to your room 24 hours a day (not to mention an entire cocktail cart's worth of booze, complete with a real live bartender, during happy hour). Oysters with uni! Earl Grey crepe cake! A gosh-dang roast half-chicken with wasabi and chickpeas! Can that even be eaten lying down? I don't know, but I'm ordering it. I'm ordering it all. —HILARY CADIGAN inn has transformed into a Wes Anderson-esque boutique hotel with a rooftop bar and a plush eatery named after an erstwhile employee of the basement strip club. ● KLEIN'S, THE HOXTON We can easily picture ourselves hanging out all day at the gorgeous brass bar in Brooklyn, eating a full English breakfast with a Dutch baby on the side.

HAVE IT ALL AT THE LINE

- Sumo Orange Cake
- Cocoa Banana Cake
- Roast Half-Chicken
- Miller High Life
- Dry-Aged Beef Burger
- French Fries
- Oysters with Uni
- Roasted Fish
- Steamed Egg
- Salmon Toast
- Fruit Bowl
- Small Planes Coffee
- Blueberry Muffin
- Peppered Chive Biscuit
- Marbled Pound Cake
- Triple Cheesecake