the view from the field if april is the cruelest month, it is a mean season indeed when even a rutabaga can't be had. if not dull roots, then what? perhaps brussels sprouts from 78 acres, maitake mushrooms from the eastern shore, and oysters from the still-frigid waters of the bay. Omar asked me what I was looking forward to and I answered, 'spring, summer, and fall, in that order,' a sentiment that may resonate well with an Amish farmer as anyone who had their livelihood pinned to last year's rain-decimated harvest. water under the bridge, you might say; we go on in sunlight. — sg
